...to Nancy McGowan who has for the past two years kept Terri Schiavo and her life-and-death dilemma before those who have the power to make a difference in the situation. She has spent countless hours at her computer researching applicable Florida statutes and making sure legislators and other elected officials know how these laws are being flagrantly disregarded in Terri's case.

Her compassion for Terri, an unfortunate victim of mysterious circumstances, has become her passion to be a voice for this woman who cannot speak for herself. She has bombarded public officials, from the president on down, with vital information they might not otherwise have known. When local media lacked interest in pursuing this eventual far-reaching, precedent-setting case, she gained the ear of the national media. The resulting avalanche of information from many national media sources has made the public aware of the gross miscarriage of justice taking place in this state.

Nancy's husband and children have sacrificed their wife and mother, her time and attention, while she has worked to save this one person's life. Her husband, Ted, says even though the family has missed having her undivided attention, he is very proud of her and knows ultimately the lives of countless others who may be in similar circumstances will reap the benefits of her labors.

Nancy has a Political Science degree from the University of Florida and served as a legislative intern for the U.S. Senate. Our hats off to this persistent, determined, devoted victims' rights advocate.
