

INFORMATION

- Know the registered sexual predators and sexual offenders in your neighborhood. Utilize the information for awareness not fear.
- Set aside time to talk to your children. Know who their friends are. Know what contacts they are making in the community and on the Internet.
- Keep current files on your children, including a recent photo, physical description, extra activities and friends' names, addresses and phone numbers. Obtain a set of footprints or fingerprints. Maintain dental or medical records.

EDUCATION

- Teach children awareness of dangerous people and the lures used to entice children. Children should be aware not afraid of the dangers.
- Remind yourself to be aware of your surroundings and those around you.
- Explain who a stranger is. Children should never enter a stranger's home, get into their car or take gifts from them.
- Advise children what to do if a stranger follows or approaches them.
- Educate yourself on what to do if a stranger follows you.
- Encourage your child to use the buddy system. Avoid letting your child walk to school alone, take shortcuts or play in isolated areas.
- Use the buddy system when you leave work or at other appropriate times.
- Tell your child what to do if you are separated from them while shopping or at a public place.
- Tell your child when on a computer, never give out personal information, never send a photograph or any other item via the Internet without parental permission, never respond to messages that make them feel uncomfortable and never agree to get together or meet anyone they met on-line.
- Remind yourself not to give out personal information, send a photograph or other personal item via the Internet. Never respond to messages that make you feel uncomfortable.
- Discuss sexual predators, offenders and strangers with your children at a level appropriate for them.
- Teach your children, if someone tries to touch them in ways which make them feel uncomfortable or afraid, or in parts of their body covered in bathing suits, they should tell.
- Tell your children you love them so they will not seek affection or attention elsewhere.
